Tim Hardy received rave reviews for his performance as Galileo, in Nic Young's The Trials of Galileo, when he premiered the one man show in a tour of the US earlier this year. He has returned to the US and is currently wowing critics and audiences alike with this powerful production.

"Passionate, intelligent, hilarious, chilling--in Tim Hardy's phenomenal performance, the knife-fight between science and religion does not take place between men, but INSIDE one."

Dr Gary Taylor, George Matthew Edgar
Professor of English, Florida State University

"Tim was wonderful in his role of Galileo. He brought us to another time and place and drew us into an intellectual debate. He sent us out alive with a continued curiosity in the interplay between science and religion."

Rosaleen Crowley, Director, Indianapolis Fringe Festival & Founder of SpeakSure

The Trials of Galileo is available for booking for 2010/2011. Script and DVD are available on request.
